MENDOCINO VALLEY SCENES — COUNTY BUILDINGS — MENDOCINO LOGGING AND COAST SCENES

Vol. XXXIV. UKIAH, MENDOCINO COUNTY, CALIFORNIA, OCTOBER 29, 1909. Number 19

POPULAR TELEPHONE EMPLOYEE WEDDED

Sunday morning at 10 the home of Surveyor and Mrs H J Randall in this city was the scene of a wedding their daughter, Miss Agnes, and Egbert Carson Williams being the contracting parties. The ceremony was witnessed only by the immediate friends and relatives of the happy couple and after congratulations a dainty wedding lunch was served. The young couple left on the noon train for Willits on their way to Albion where they will reside.

The bride is a charming and accomplished young lady and for the past three years has been one of the most popular and obliging employees of the local telephone office. As a token of the esteem in which she was held by the other employees of the office she was presented with a handsome silver butter dish and a silver cake stand.

The groom is a promising young business man of Albion and will have charge of the Albion postoffice. The Press joins the many friends of the happy couple in wishing them a long and happy life and trusting that their married life will never be bothered by down wires or short circuits.

MARION OSBORNE MARRIED

Marion Osborne and Miss May Donohoe were married in Oakland last Friday afternoon at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Mott. The wedding was attended by relatives and a few close friends of the contracting couple. Mrs. Crittenden and Mrs. Eddy of Potter Valley, were the only Mendocino county people present at the wedding. After spending their honeymoon in Los Angeles and Yosemite valley they will go to Mill Valley where they will make their home. Mr. Osborne was connected with the Ukiah Fish Hatchery for a number of years and now has a good position with the California Trout Farm, whose ponds are at Inverness.

BACHEM PREDICTS REPUBLICAN VICTORY

Carl Bachem of Glen Blair was in town this week on his way home from helping celebrate the landing of Portola. Bachem reports a fine time and is of the opinion that the Portola was the best ever. He says that times are prosperous on the coast and that the outlock for a Republican victory in the coming election is very bright. Mr Bachem is a genial gentleman and the Glen Blair people are fortunate in having such a popular man in charge.

DIES AT ELMHURST

James Coughlin died at his home at Elmhurst last Friday afternoon after an illness of several weeks with typhoid fever. He was 31 years old and leaves a wife and ono daughter to whom their Ukiah friends extend their heartfelt sympathy.

Is made of long-book Havana filler, carefully selected for mildness and pleasing aroma, and wrapped in a superior grade of Sumatra. This is what you will find when you buy The Fisher for 10 cents, or a King Fisher for 12 1-2 cents. We could write about them all day but you could not appreciate their excellent qualities until you had smoked one. They are made in Ukiah and are smoked by the leading men of our city. Try one and you will always call for a Fisher. Manufactured by The Ukiah Cigar Factory, George Fisher, propietor. Phone Main 1383. Residence and factory, 531 North State street.

HORSE KIDNAPS A BOY FROM WILLITS

William Jones, a fourteen-year-old boy who has been working for the construction company at Willits, hired a horse from Henry Bowen yesterday to take a ride around the valley. The horse got started toward Ukiah and kept coming. Henry telephoned to Sheriff Donohoe to head him off and stop him. The boy had never been in Ukiah before and rode into town before he discovered where he was. He succeeded in getting the horse turned around and rode down into Wagonseller addition where he left the horse and took to the railroad. The horse was recovered and the boy is now being searched for His brother came down from Willits on the noon train and was very anxious to find the youth as he says that it is the first time that he ever got into trouble. The charge against the youth is riding the horse further than he had hired him to go which is a misdemeanor.

A STOCKTON MAN BUYS GOOD RANCH

S Wolfenbargar, of Stockton, has been looking around Ukiah and vacinity for several days, with the intention of buying a home if he could find anything that suited him; and after investigating everything that was offered for sale, decided that a piece of the land recently purchased by Brunner and Briggs from M L Gibson for sub-division was the best that was to be had. He closed a deal for an eight acre tract, having a frontage on the county road and on which the dwelling house and barn are located.

The survey and plat of the sub-division are now completed and it is expected that a number of sales will be made in a short time, as J M Owen's office, through which the land is being sold, is receiving many inquiries.

DEATH OF NATHAN C HINSHAW

Nathan Hinshaw died at his home in this city last Friday morning after a lingering illness. The deceased was a well thought of citizen and had been a resident of this city for a number of years, having located in this valley in 1873. Three years later he associated himself in the butcher business with C P Smith and later was in the livery business with A C Perry. For a number of years he has been engaged in ranching. The deceased was born in Platte county, Mo., March 26, 1845 and September 12, 1874, he was married to Ellen York. The bereaved widow and son, Albert Lee, and a daughsurvive him and share the sympathy of the community.

POTTER WILL DANCE THANKSGIVING

Frank Gibson was down from Potter valley Wednesday and reports that he and Roy Barnett are getting things in shape for a grand ball Thanksgiving night, November 24th. Cobles orchestra has been engaged and the floor of the Grangers hall will be put in firstclass shape. At midnight one of those turkey suppers for which Potter is famous will be served at the Potter valley hotel. A number of Ukiah people expect to attend.

CONTRACT LET FOR BRIDGE

The board of trustees awarded George Shinn the contract for building the new bridge across the river in Potter valley at their meeting last Friday. The bridge will be erected at the Grover King crossing and is to be completed before winter. Mr Shinn's bid was for $1068, the next lowest bid being $1736.

IMPROVING CHURCH PROPERTY

A cement sidewalk is being put down in front of the parsonage of the St John's M E church. The lot in front of the church is also being filled in and will be planted to lawn. The church property will then present a very much more attractive appearance.

WEST of COURT HOUSE

Our New Cottrell Cylinder Press

This issue of the Republican Press is printed on our new Monarch drum cylinder press which was built for us by C B Cottrell & Sons of Westerly, R I. Mr C H Edwards who has charge of erecting presses for the Cottrell people on the coast was sent by the firm to see that the new press was properly adjusted and in perfect shape so that the subscribers of the Republican Press might receive the best possible service. Needless to say that Mr Edwards succeeded and that the new press is working as perfectly as a watch.

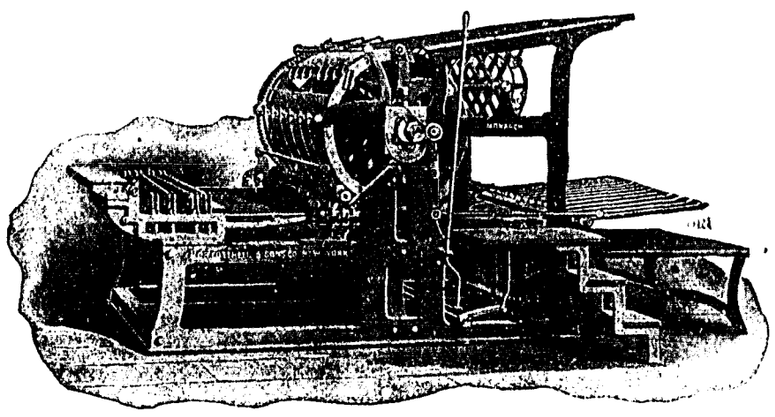
The new press weighs nearly six tons and the freight bill alone on it from the east was $300, which will give our subscribers an idea of the cost of keeping them supplied with the news. The press is the last word in drum cylinder printing presses and has all of the attachments that have been devised for saving labor and time. In fact it is the best press of the kind made and presses of the same make are used in printing the Ladies Home Journal and the Saturday Evening Post and a number of other high class publications.

The ease of operation of the new press may be judged by the fact that when it is moving at full speed a lead pencil will remain balanced on the frame. Even at high speed it is practically noisless. Considering that the press weighs nearly 10,000 pounds and that the parts in motion are necessarily very heavy the perfection of this machine is remarkable. A three horsepower electric motor furnishes the power and in addition to the new press runs two job presses and a folder at the same time.

The fine points of the new press of course cannot be appreciated by the reader who has not served his time in the printing business to the degree that they can by the Press force. To give an idea of the machine to our subscribers we nave have had it photographed and a cut made so that they may be able to see just exactly how a first class cylinder press appears. A closer inspection is invited by our friends who happen to be sojourning in this neighborhood and it will be a pleasure to show them through the press rooms.

In connection with the installing of the new press we desire to thank our friends for their liberal patronage which has made the installation of new machinery imperative. For years the circulation of the Press has been increasing and the inadequacy of our old machinery was becoming more apparent. A few months ago the press rooms were enlarged and we installed a new folder and finally determined that we must have a faster press. The new press will deliver 1800 printed Republican Presses an hour and the folder will have them ready for mailing within a few minutes after the press is stopped.

With the old press we occasionally missed the mail as it was impossible to get the papers printed in time. In giving our subscribers all of the news it is occasionally necessary to wait until within an hour of the closing of the mail before putting the last forms on the press and every few minutes saved in the time of running of the papers means that we will have just that much more time to devote to getting the latest news.



With our old machinery we were hardly in a position to solicit more subscrieers, but with our new machinery we will again be in the field. To this end we have secured the finest line of premiums that have ever been offered by any paper and in a week or two will publish the announcement with illustratrations of the premiums. The Press now has the largest circulation ever reached by any paper in Mendocino county and reaches more homes than any three papers outside of the county seat each week.

Our policy will be to continue to improve the Press by adding new features and in every way keeping it up to the standard. Incidentially it may be said that we will also keep our plant abreast of the times.

With the installation of this new press it is now not only possible to print the Press much faster and better but we will also be in a position to handle a greater variety of job work and the sending of some of the larger jobs to the city offices will no longer be a necessity in Mendocino county.

TAX COLLECTOR IS NOW ON THE JOB

Tax Collector Van Dyke is now busy taking in taxes. He is making an ideal officer and much favorable comment is being expressed for his idea in sending out duplicate tax receipts to the tax payers. This gives the owner of a piece of land a chance to compare the description if any mistake has been make in assessing it the matter can be straightened out before any serious damage is done. If this system had been adopted years ago many a person would have been saved money that they have been compelled to pay out on redemptions.

FORT BRAGG GIRL MARRIES

Miss Irene Ballister, a former Fort Bragg girl, and William Beyer of San Francisco were married last Friday. Both young people are well known on the coast and haye many friends who wish them success.

PBEACHED FORTY YEARS AGO

The Beacon says that Rev J S Ross preached at Caspar last Sunday to celebrate his fortieth year of work on the coast. He preached his first sermon at Caspar October 17, 1869.

HATS OFF TO FORT BRAGG, GENTLEMEN

Fort Bragg is known in San Francisco now by its fine apples. The cause of it is that the San Francisco people got a chance to sample some of Mendocino county's best apples during Portola week. Over 100 boxes were in Fort Bragg's massive redwood log float and during the parade these apples were thrown out among the crowds on the sidewalks who scrambled for them as if they had been twenty dollar pieces. The Call contained a very good picture of the float, which was really one of the most interesting features of the big parade. The Fort Bragg chamber of commerce has taken front rank among the promotion organizations of the county by their work in securing this float and deserves great praise.

COASTERS TAKE WATER

C J Buchanan jr and party who started for Greenwood Wednesday afternoon in his auto came to grief about ten miles out of town. The bearings in the crank shaft burned out and they were compelled to walk in in the rain arriving late in the evening. Jack Kingreen who was one of the party says that autoing is allright but that walking is bad in the mud.

TAX MONEY COMING FASTER THIS YEAR

Tax Collector W S Van Dyke and his deputies are busy this week collecting taxes and sending out receipts. The taxes became due on October 11 this year and during the fourteen days in which they have been payable $6534.71 has been collected. During the first fourteen days last year the collections amounted to only $4629.81. This makes a difference of $2104.90 more that has been collected this year over that paid in up to this time last year.

Surely this shows that times are better and that the Tax Collector knows how to get the people to pay up their taxes and avoid having them become delinquent. The duplicate receipts which were sent out by the Tax Collector this year have played a great part in the work and he is making every effort to have everything absolutely correct in his office. Mr Van Dyke is an energetic and enterprising man and has proven to be the best Tax Collector that has ever held office in this county.

COMMERCIAL BANK MOVES TO NEW HOME

The new Commercial Bank building is completed and all of the new furniture has been installed. Men are busy at work today moving the books and money from the old building and getting them arranged in their places at their new home. The interior of the bank is very elaborately finished and is one of the most convenient and up-to-date buildings in Ukiah. Cashier Cunningham and Assistant Thomas consequently wear a broad smile.

HOLBROOK WINS HOMESTEAD ENTRY

Recorder E E Holbrook is now one of the happiest men in town. He received word from the department that his homestead had been granted. Gene has been trying to get his homestead for several months but some of the government inspectors held him up because he had not lived on the claim all of the time. Gene proved that he had been deputy postmaster at Potter and in the employ of the government and since being in Ukiah had been recorder and in the employ of the county. For this reason he had been able to maintain his residence at his claim. The Oakland office denied his entry but he carried it up and won. This is one of the first cases of the kind in the county. Mr Holbrook had improved his claim and done a great deal of work on it and had resided there as nearly in compliance with the law as it was possible for a man to do. He is now the proud possessor of a fine mountain ranch.

CHARGED WITH HOG STEALING

Oscar Dunham and James Powell both of Cummings are being held in the county jail charged with felony, and awaiting their preliminary examination which will be held at Willits the first of next week. It is claimed that they took hogs belonging to neighboring ranchers and changed the mark on them so that they could sell them with their own hogs in the spring. The Powell brothers were arrested several months ago on a similar charge and one of them served a six-months sentence in the jail while James was given his freedom.

KINGREEN TO OPEN LIQUOR STORE

J W Kingren came up from San Francisco Tuesday and spent a day in town. He was on his way back to Point Arena where he will open his wholesale liquor store Saturday night and is preparing to give his friends the time of their lives. He says that there will be two roast pigs and a keg of German beer and that everyone will be welcome. Jack will have his main store in Point Arena and a branch in Greenwood and will carry a complete stock.

STRUCK BY AN AUTOMOBILE

Charles Bowlin of Fort Bragg was injured in San Francisco during the Portola festival by being struck by an automobile Bowlin was looking at the electric bell on Market street when someone slapped him in the face with a "tickler." He leaped back and was struck by an automobile which ran over him. He was taken to the emergency hospital and afterward sent to his home at Fort Bragg. He was not fatally injured.

WILLITS MAN FASTS FORTY-THREE DAYS

J D Barnwell of Willits may break the world's fasting record of 53 days, as he is now on his 43rd day without food. He is still able to be about the house and seems to be in good health, barring the fact that he feels weak. On several previous occasions he has fasted for several weeks at a time and he thinks the trouble with most people is that they eat too much. The reason Mr Barnwell began his fast was to try and cure his stomach trouble. On the fourteenth day he tried to eat some soup but could not and on the 30th day he tried some venison juice with the same result. All he takes is hot water which he sups. Barnwell is 70 years old and at the time he started weighed 170 pounds and now he is reduced to about 120 pounds.

HAS SHOUBDER DISLOCATED

Duane Bittenbender of Willits had his shoulder dislocated last Saturday by being thrown out of his buggy. His horse became frightened and ran away, throwing Bittenbender under the buggy. He did not regain consciousness until several hours after the accident. Aside from a dislocated shoulder he received several bad cuts and bruises about the head and shoulders but is not seriously injured.

WEATHER REPORT

Dr George McCowen hands in the following report. Maximum temperature 81 degrees, Minimum temperature 35 degrees. .38 inch of rain fell during the week, 1.84 inches for the month and 2.56 inches for the season. Rain up to this date last season 1.77.

Word has been received from D M Gibson who is in Mexico that he does not like that part of the country and will be home in a few days. He says the country is not as good as it was represented and after all believes that Mendocino county is one of the best places on the map.

WHAT MERRIHEW FOUND.

THE great ship had passed the isle of Ischia, and now the bay of Naples unfolded all its variant beauties. Both he and Merrihew were foremost in the press against the forward rail. To the latter's impressionable mind it was like a dream—yonder, the temples and baths of Nero of the golden house; thither, the palaces of the grim Tiberius; beyond, Pompeii, with Glaucus, Ione and Nydia, the blind girl. The dream picture faded, and the reality was no less fascinating—the white sails of the fishermen winging across the sapphire waters, leaving ribboned pathways behind; proud white pleasure yachts, great vessels from all ports in the world, and an occasional battleship, drab and stealthy, and the hundred pink and white villages, the jade and amethyst of the islands, the ruined temples, the grim giant ash heap of Vesuvius.

"See that village on the cliffs toward the south?" asked Hillard. "That's Sorrento, where I was born. Sh! Look at Giovanni!"

Merrihew looked at the old Roman. Tears were running down his cheeks, and his gaze strove to pierce the distance to the faroff Sabine hills. Italy! Hillard leaned over and touched him on the arm, and he started.

"Take care, Giovanni."

"Pardon! I am weak this day, but tomorrow I shall be strong. Seven years! Have you not longed for it yourself? Has not your heart gone out many times across the seas to those cliffs?" pointing to Sorrento.

"Many times, Giovanni. But remember and control yourself. Presently the carabinieri will come on board. You will see that all our luggage goes promptly to the Bristol once we are through the customs."

"Trust me, signor."

They landed at the custom house at 2 in the afternoon and passed without any difficulty.

Hillard obtained rooms pleasantly situated looking out upon the sparkling bay. Giovanni began at once to unpack the trunks, happy enough to have something to occupy him till after dark, when he determined to venture forth. The dreaded carabinieri had paid him not the slightest attention. So far he was as safe as though he were in New York.

It was yet so early in the day that the two young men sallied forth in quest of light adventure. Besides, Merrihew was very eager to find some Roman and Florence newspapers. The American Comic Opera company was somewhere north. They found stationed outside the hotel a rosy cheeked cabby who answered to the name of Tomasso, or Tomass, as the Neapolitans generally drop the finals. He carried a bright red lap robe and blanket, spoke a little English and was very proud of the accomplishment. He was rather disappointed, however, when Hillard bargained with him in his own tongue. Tomass shook his fingers under Hillard's nose, and Hillard returned the compliment. Finally Tomass compromised on 1 lira 50 centesimi (30 cents) per hour, with 50 centisimi (10 cents) as a pourboire (tip). Crack, crack! Down the hill they went, as if a thousand devils were after them.

"By George," gasped Merrihew, clutching his seat, "the fool will break our necks!"

Tomass grinned and cracked his whip. He did not understand the word slowly in his own tongue or in any other, at least not till he reached the shops. A dozen times on the Via Roma Merrihew yelled that they would lose a wheel. But Tomass knew the game.

Merrihew had never seen such shops. Coral, coral wherever the eye roamed—where did they get it all, and to whom did they sell it? Necklaces, tiaras, rings, brooches, carved and uncarved—were there women enough in the world to buy these things?

"If I had a wife"— he began.

"Well?"

"I'd feel devilish sorry for her husband at this moment."

"But isn't the color great?" said Hillard. It was good to be in Naples again.

"I never saw so many kids," Merrihew finally observed, "so many dirty ones," he added. "Herod would have had his work cut out for him here. Now where can we get some newspa-

THIS COAST GOOD APPLE COUNTRY

As a means of proving his assertion that the coast section is as good for the growing of fine apples as any section he had seen in his recent tour of the state, Pete Matson left a generous box of fine eating apples at the Beacon office last Saturday.

There are a few farmers along the coast who have demonstrated the fact that the climate in the redwood belt is just a little superior to anything known in the state for the growing of apples, which bring above par prices in any market. Some appreciate the fact and have put out good orchards.

A larger acreage should be planted to those varieties of apples which the city market demand. The market is rarely overstocked with good apples and the reason is simple enough. Comparatively a small percentage of the apples grown in California are fit for the market. Generally speaking it is not for the market. Generally speaking it is not an apple country, but has a world-wide reputation for its oranges, lemons, olives, figs, cherries, apricots, nectarines, grapes, etc., but for apples the people usually look to Oregon. The coast section will not produce citrus fruits, but Oregon cannot excel the redwood belt for the fine quality of its apples; and our orchards are free from codlin moth and other pests.—Beacon.

pers? I must know where she is."

At the bookshop in the piazza they found the Rome and Florence papers. Hillard went through them thoroughly, but nowhere did he see anything relative to the doings of the American Comic Opera company.

"Not a line, Dan."

"But there must be something in the Florence paper. They should be playing there yet."

"Nothing. These papers are two weeks old."

Merrihew stared blankly at the sheet. "I should like to know what it means."

"We will write to the consulate in Rome. If there has been any trouble he will certainly notify us. I'll write tonight. Now, here's Cook's next door. We'll ask if there is any mail for Kitty Killigrew."

But there wasn't, nor had there been, and the name was not on the forwarding books.

"Looks as if your Kitty were the needle in the haystack."

"Cut it!" savagely. Pictures and churches and museums were all well enough, but Merrihew wanted Kitty Killigrew above all the treasures of earth.

When they turned down to the Via Caracciolo, with the full sweep of the magnificent bay at their feet, Merrihew's disappointment softened somewhat. It was the fashionable hour. The band was playing near by in the Villa Nazionale. Americans were everywhere. Occasionally a stray princess or countess flashed by inert and listless against the cushions and invariably overdressed. And when men accompanied them the men (if they were husbands) lolled back, even more listless. And beggars of all sorts and descriptions besieged the "very great grand rich Americans."

They were nearly a week in Naples. They saw the galleries, the museums and churches; they saw underground Naples; they made the weary and useful ascent of Vesuvius, and Merrihew added a new smell to his collection every hour. Pompeii by moonlight, however, was worth a thosand ordinary dreams, and Merrihew, who had abundant imagination, but no art with which to express it, happily or unhappily, saw Lytton's story unfold in all its romantic splendor.

They lingered at Amalfi three days and dreamed away the hours under the white pergola. Merrihew was loath to leave, but Hillard was for going on to Sorrento, for which his heart was always longing.

A spring rain fell as they took the incline, and it followed them over the mountains and down into Sorrento. They finally drew up in the courtyard of the Hotel de la Sirena, and the long ride was at an end. The little garden was white and pink with roses and camellias, and the tubbed mandarins were heavy with fruit.

"And this is March," said Merrihew, his thought traveling back to his own bleak country, where winter is so long and summer is so short.

Their rooms were on the northeast corner, on the first floor, and from the windows they could look down upon the marina piccola and the tideless sea, a sheer 150 feet below. Everybody welcomed the Signor Hillard. The hotel was his and everything and everybody in it.

Later, when they were alone, Hillard began to explain.

"They remember my father. He used to live like a prince in Sorrento. Every time I come here I do the best I can to keep the luster to his name. Tomorrow I shall point out to you the villa in which I was born. A Russian princess owns it now."

"A real live princess!" said Merrihew. "Is she beautiful?"

"Once upon a time," returned Hillard, laughing.

Giovanni did not return till late that night, and on the morrow Hillard questioned him.

"I have been to see a cousin," said Giovanni, "who lives on the way to El Deserta."

"Ah! So you have a cousin here?"

"Yes, signor."

How old he looked, poor devil! Hillard had not taken particular notice of him during the past week's excursions. Giovanni had aged ten years since they landed.

"And was this cousin glad to see you? And is he to be trusted?"

"Both, signor. He had some news. She—the girl—is a dancer in a Paris cafe."

"Would you like me to give you the necessary money to go to Paris and bring her back to the Sabine hills?" Hillard asked softly.

"I shall go to Paris, signor—after."

"What is his name?" Hillard had never till this moment asked this question.

"I know it. That is sufficient. He is high, signor, very high, yet I shall reach him. If I told you his name"—

"There would be the possibility of my warning him."

"That is why I hesitate."

"You are a Catholic, Giovanni."

Giovanni signified that he was.

"Does not the God of all Catholics, of all Christians, in fact—does he not say that vengeance is his and that he will repay?"

"But there are so many of us, signor, so many of us small and of slight importance, that, likely enough, God, with all his larger cares, has not the time to remember us. What may happen to him in the hereafter does not concern me, for he will certainly be in the purgatory of the rich and I in the purgatory of the poor. It must be now, now!"

"Go your own way," said Hillard, dismissing him. "I shall never urge you again."

Giovanni gone, Hillard leaned against the casement. The sun was bright this morning, and the air was clear. He could see Naples distinctly. Below, the fishermen and their wives, their bare feet plowing in the wet sands, were drawing in the nets, swaying their bodies gracefully.

And then Merrihew burst in upon him wildly excited and flourished the hotel register.

"Look at this!" he cried breathlessly. He flung the book on the table and pointed with shaking finger.

Hillard came forward, and this is what he saw:

Thomas O'Mally
James Smith
Arthur Worth
La Signorina Capricciosa
Kitty Killigrew
Am. Comic Opera Co., N. Y.

"Kitty has been here!"

"Perfectly true. But I wonder"—

"Wonder about what?" asked Merrihew.

"Who La Signorina Capricciosa is. Whimsical, indeed. She must be the mysterious prima donna."

Hillard studied the easy flowing hand and ran his fingers through his hair thoughtfully.

"What is it?" asked Merrihew curiously.

"I am wondering where I have seen that handwriting before."

Another fortnight found the pair back in Naples after spending a week on Capri. At the hotel they found a batch of mail. There was a letter which held particular interest to Merrihew. It was from the consul at Rome, a reply to Hillard's inquiries regarding the American Comic Opera company.

"We'll now find out where your charming Kitty is," Hillard said, breaking the seal.

But they didn't. On the contrary, the writer hadn't the slightest idea where the play actors were or had gone. They had opened a two weeks' engagement at the Teatro Quirino. There had been a good house on the opening night. The remainder of the week did not show the sale of a hundred tickets. The American manager had shown neither foresight nor common sense, and his backer withdrew his support. The percentage demanded by the managers in Florence, Genoa, Milan and Venice was so exorbitant (although they had agreed to a moderate term in the beginning) that it would have been nothing short of foolhardiness to try to fill the bookings. The singing of the prima donna,

"Look at this!" he cried.

however, had created a highly favorable impression among the critics, but she was unknown. The writer also advised Mr. Hillard not to put his money in any like adventure.

"That's hard luck," growled Merrihew, who saw his hopes go down the horizon.

"But it makes me out a pretty good prophet," was Hillard's rejoinder. "The angel's money gave out. Too many obstacles. To conquer a people and a government by light opera—it can't be done here. And so the American Comic Opera company at the present moment is vegetating in some little boarding house waiting for money from home."

Merrihew gnawed the end of his cane. All his pleasant dreams had burst like soap bubbles. Had they not always done so? There would be no jaunts with Kitty, no pleasant little excursions, no little suppers after the performance. And what's a Michelangelo or a Titian when a man's in love?

"Brace up, Dan. Who knows? Kitty may be on the high seas—that is, if she has taken my advice and got a return ticket. I'll give you a dinner at the Bertolini tonight, and you may have the magnum of any vintage you like. We'll have Tomass drive us down the Via Caracciolo. It will take some of the disappointment out of your system."

They had ridden up and down the Via Caracciolo twice when they espied a huge automobile, ultramarine blue. It passed with a cloud of dust and a rumble which was thunderous. Hillard half rose from his seat.

"Somebody you know?" asked Merrihew.

"The man at the wheel looked a bit like Sandford."

"Sandford? By George, that would be jolly!"

"Perhaps they will come this way again. Tomass, follow that motor."

Sure enough, when the car reached the Largo Vittoria it wheeled and came rumbling back. This time Hillard had no doubts. He stood up and waved his arms. The automobile barked and groaned and came to a stand.

"Hello, Sandford!"

"Jack Hillard, as I live, and Dan Merrihew! Well," turning to one of the three pretty women in the tonneau, "what did I tell you? I felt it in my bones that we would run across some one we knew."

"Or over them," his wife laughed.

When we meet an old friend in a foreign land, one who has accepted our dinners and with whom we have often dined, what is left but to fall on his neck and weep? There was, then, over this meeting much ado with handshaking and compliments, handshaking and questions, and, as in all cases like this, every one talked at once—how was old New York, how was the winter in Cairo, and so forth and so on—till a policeman politely told them that this was not a private thoroughfare and that they were blocking the way. So they parted, the two young men having promised to dine with the Sandford party that evening.

"What luck, Dan!" Hillard was exuberant.

"Saves you the price of a dinner."

"I wasn't thinking of that. But I shall find out all about her tonight."

"Who?"

"The lady in the fog, the masquerading lady!"

MORE RAILROAD TALK FOR LAKE CO

The directors of the Highland Pacific Railroad Co held a meeting at the office of the Lake County Land Co Wednesday afternoon, President Dr A E Dickinson and W P Mariner coming over from Ukiah, and John Garner being present from Upper Lake. The articles of incorporation were perfected, adopted, and on the following day filed with the county clerk and sent on to the secretary of state at Sacramento.

The firm proposing to buy the bonds of this company wanted to increase the capitalization to five million, but as nearly all the rights of way have been secured on an understanding that the capital stock would be $2,500,000, to keep good faith with the grantors of rights and avoid the inconvenience of again going over the field, it was decided to incorporate for the latter sum. This action, on explanation, is said to have been satisfactory to the capitalists.

The stock is of the par value of $100 a share, and the required subscription of $109 a mile for the ninety miles of road proposed to be built, has been made by the directors, in the following proportion: J E Fulton, $20,000; D F McIntire, $10,000; J R Garner, $10,000; W P Mariner, $20,000; A E Dickinson, $30,000. Of these subscription, ten per cent has been actually paid in to the treasurer, J R Garner. As has been heretofore stated in the Press, the Highland Pacific company has an offer to buy all the bonds, when $400,000 has been raised on stock subscriptions. This the directors feel confident of doing, making the assertion that a fair proportion of it has already been subscribed in Santa Rosa and Alexander Valley, as well as promises in this county. The circulation of the stock subscription list will begin locally in a week.

The articles of incorporation make a few changes in the previously understood plans of the Highland Pacific company. The principal place of business will be in the Mills Building, San Francisco, instead of Lakeport. The road is proposed to be run from Santa Rosa to Upper Lake, with a branch line running from a point three and a half miles south of Lakeport to Kelseyville.

Directors Mariner and Dickinson will be in Sonoma county next week securing the few rights of way remaining ungranted.—Clear Lake Press.
